

Remote Learning Reflection Journal

Week 1 Monday 5th October - Friday 9th October

What you will do...

This week for writing you will be reflecting on your time during remote learning.

Each day you will work on your journal and by Friday you will have completed your journal.

Today you will get your head around the task, planning what topics you will write about and creating a front cover.

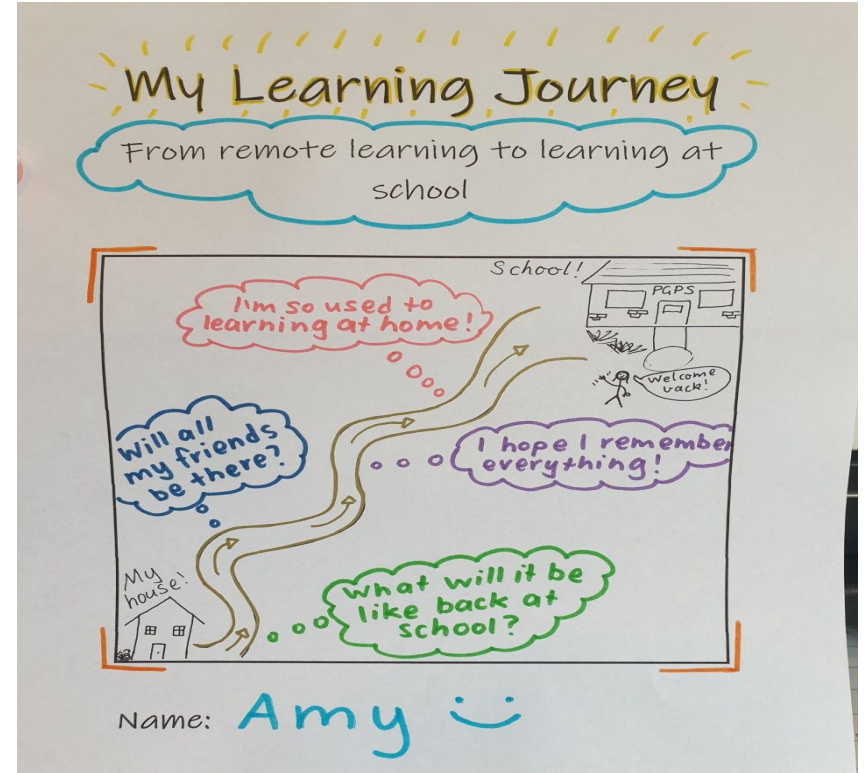

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday you will be composing your reflections under the topics you chose.

On Friday you will edit and publish your reflection journal and submit it to your teacher.

Front Cover

Your front cover should include:

- a title (It could be My Remote Learning Reflection Journal)
- Your Name
- A picture about remote learning (this could be a brain, a photo of your work space, anything that you associate with remote learning)

Topics

My learning space at home

Where I like to spend most of my time at home

A time when I was the happiest at home

What makes learning easier for me

What I am excited for going back to school

What I am worried about going back to school

Topics

On the previous slide were the different topics you can choose to write about in your reflection journal.

You MUST do at least 4 of these topics.

You can choose to add your own if you want.

My Learning Space At Home

When I was doing remote learning, I was in my study. I was lucky to have a room all to myself. It had a bright lamp and a nice window looking out into my backyard. I always liked to light candles that smell nice.

I also liked to listen to music while I worked at my desk. I had all my materials set up too.

Criteria

You must have at least 4 topics.

You must have a minimum of 5 sentences per topic.

You must include a picture relating to your written information. This can be drawn, digital or a photo.

You must give detail about the topic, using descriptive language and explain the reason behind your choices.

On Friday you must edit and publish your work and email it to your teacher.

A Time I Was Happiest At Home

During remote learning, we all spent lots of time at home! In all this extra time at home, I started doing watercolour painting. I bought some materials online and practised painting lots of different things like mixing colours in different ways, flowers and shapes. One of the things I am happiest and proudest of is painting blank cards that I can send to my friends and family. I painted the ocean in different colours and with different coloured skies.
